

NOT WANTED

"The bark beetles' destruction spread across 524,000 new acres in Colorado and Wyoming last year, much of which was in Larimer County, as the beetles began to heavily infest forests east of the Continental Divide." – Fort Collins Coloradoan Jan, 23, 2010

"If the beetles continue to spread and jump from lodgepole pines to ponderosa pines, which grow throughout the foothills, much of the Front Range could be affected, and it could produce "a very devastating circumstance," U.S. Forest Service regional forester Rick Cables said.

Follow the lead of Larimer County Commissioners Steve Johnson, Tom Donnelly and Lew Gaiter

Help slow the beetle infestation and mitigate the damage that could result from the next big wildfire by becoming a Beetle Buster

YOU can help them make a difference!

Register for the
Larimer County "Beetle Buster" Workshop

On September 25

Includes classroom and field training

For more information visit

<http://www.treefarmer.com/Larimer County Beetle Busters.html>

or call (970) 482-6912

